

IN THE UNITED STATES ARMY
COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS

UNITED STATES,
Petitioner,

-versus-

Colonel (0-6)
CHARLES L. PRITCHARD,
Military Judge,
U.S. Army,

Respondent,

and

Lieutenant Colonel (0-5)
ANDREW J. DIAL, U.S. Army,
Real Party in Interest.

AMICUS CURIAE BRIEF OF THE
NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CRIMINAL DEFENSE LAWYERS [NACDL]
In Support of the Real Party in Interest

Docket No. ARMY MISC 20220001

Date: 15 March 2022

DONALD G. REHKOPF, JR., Esq.

Counsel of Record

Law Office of Donald G. Rehkopf, Jr.
31 East Main Street, Liberty Plaza, 4th Floor (Right Suite)
Rochester, New York 14614
CAAF Bar # 20564

(585) 434-0232 - voice

usmilitarylaw@gmail.com

BARBARA E. BERGMAN, Esq.

Co-Chair, Amicus Curiae Committee
National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers
1201 Speedway Blvd.
Tucson, AZ 85721

bbergman@email.arizona.edu

Counsel for Amicus Curiae, NACDL

Panel 3

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
TABLE OF AUTHORITIES	iii
INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE	1
I. PRELIMINARY MATTERS	4
A. The Specified Issue Improvidently Seeks an “Advisory Opinion.”.....	4
B. Whether This Court Has Jurisdiction is a Substantial Issue.....	4
1. The All Writs Act Does Not Confer Jurisdiction.....	5
2. Article 62, UCMJ, Does Not Confer Jurisdiction.....	6
II. THE MILITARY JUDGE’S DECISION BELOW	7
A. The Burden of Proof.....	8
B. The “Separate Society” Analysis Below Is Erroneous.....	9
C. The Military “Deference” Doctrine is Inapplicable Where the Issue is of Constitutional Dimension—Dealing With Deference: Judges versus Congress.....	13
D. Ex Parte Quirin is Inapplicable in This Case.....	14
E. Stare Decisis Does Not Save the Day.....	15
III. INTRODUCTION—NACDL’s POSITION IN SUPPORT OF RPI	16
A. The Unanimity Issue Through a Different Lens.....	18
B. Historical Context.....	18
IV. SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT	21

V. ARGUMENT.	24
A. U.S. Courts-Martial Have Been Considered “Judicial” for Almost 135 Years: The Impact of Ortiz	25
B. The Evolution of a “Fair Trial” in the Military.....	28
C. The Sixth Amendment and Its Application to Military Justice.....	30
D. The Sixth Amendment Has Already Been Extensively Incorporated Into Our Military Justice System.....	31
1. Speedy Trial	32
2. Public Trial	33
3. Confrontation	33
4. Notice	33
5. Compulsory Process	33
6. The Right to Counsel	33
7. The Right to the Effective Assistance of Counsel	34
E. Enter Ramos	35
CONCLUSION.	39
CERTIFICATION	40
CERTIFICATE OF FILING and PROOF OF SERVICE.	41

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page

CASES

American Publ'g Co. v. Fisher , 166 U.S. 464 (1897).	19
Bolling v. Sharpe , 347 U.S. 497 (1954).	16
Burns v. Wilson , 346 U.S. 137 (1953)..	9
Chandler v. Florida , 449 U.S. 560 (1981).	25
Chenoweth v. Van Arsdall , 46 C.M.R. 183 (CMA 1973)..	31
Clinton v. Goldsmith , 526 U.S. 529 (1999).	5-6
Courtney v. Williams , 1 M.J. 267 (CMA 1976).	8, 29
Crawford v. Washington , 541 U.S. 36 (2004).	29
Ex Parte Quirin , 317 U.S. 1 (1942)..	14
Flast v. Cohen , 392 U.S. 83 (1968)..	4
Gray v. Gray , 645 Fed.Appx. 624 (10 th Cir. 2016)..	26
Gulf, C.&S. F. Ry. Co. v. Ellis , 165 U.S. 150 (1897).	20
Hamdi v. Rumsfeld , 542 U.S. 507 (2004).	14
Haupt v. United States , 330 U.S. 631 (1947).	14
HV v. United States , 75 M.J. 331 (CAAF 2016)..	6
Kurtz v. Moffitt , 115 U.S. 487 (1885).	27
Lehnhausen v. Lake Shore Auto Parts Co. , 410 U.S. 356 (1973).	10

Lewis v. United States, 518 U.S. 322 (1996). 16

Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. (1 Cr.) 139 (1803). 13, 37

Nix v. Whiteside, 475 U.S. 157 (1986). 37

Noyd v. Bond, 395 U.S. 683, (1969). 5

Orloff v. Willoughby, 345 U.S. 83 (1953). 9-10

Parker v. Levy, 417 U.S. 733 (1974) 9, 13

Pennsylvania Bureau of Corrections v. U.S. Marshals Service, 474 U.S. 34 (1985). 5

Ramos v. Louisiana 140 S. Ct. 1390 (2020). passim

Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1 (1957). 12, 14, 21

Richmond Newspapers, Inc. v. Virginia, 448 U.S. 555 (1980). 17

Rock v. Arkansas, 483 U.S. 44 (1987). 32

Stogner v. California, 539 U.S. 607 (2003). 19

Syngenta Crop Protection, Inc. v. Henson, 537 U.S. 28 (2002). 6

United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, 350 U.S. 11 (1955). 9

United States v. Bess, 75 M.J. 70 (CAAF 2016). 32

United States v. Blazier, 69 M.J. 218 (CAAF 2010). 32

United States v. Chisholm, 59 M.J. 151 (CAAF 2003). 4

United States v. Clay, 1 C.M.R. 74 (CMA 1951). 25, 28-29

United States v. Cooper, 58 M.J. 54 (CAAF 2003). 32

United States v. Easton, 71 M.J. 168 (CAAF 2012)..... 8

United States v. Fruehauf, 365 U.S. 146 (1961)..... 4

United States v. Girouard, 70 M.J. 5 (CAAF 2011)..... 32

United States v. Gooch, 69 M.J. 353 (CAAF 2011)..... 33

United States v. Gray, 51 M.J. 1 (CAAF 1999). 26

United States v. Grunden, 2 M.J. 116 (CMA 1977)..... 32

United States v. Hershey, 20 M.J. 433 (CMA 1985). 32

United States v. Jacoby, 29 C.M.R. 244 (CMA 1960)..... 25-26, 29

United States v. Johnson, 41 M.J. 13 (CMA 1994). 37

United States v. McClain, 22 M.J. 124 (CMA 1986)..... 22-23

United States v. Modesto, 43 M.J. 315 (CAAF 1995). 22

United States v. Roland, 50 M.J. 66 (CAAF 1999). 25

United States v. Wattenbarger, 21 M.J. 41 (CMA 1985)..... 33

United States v. Wiesen, 56 M.J. 172 (CAAF 2001). 22

Wainwright v. Witt, 469 U.S. 412 (1985). 25

Weiss v. United States, 510 U.S. 163 (1994). 11, 23, 24, 33, 37

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS

Article I, § 8..... 7, 11, 16-17, 20, 25

Article III, § 2. 14, 16, 23

Fifth Amendment..... 7, 22-23, 25, 33

Sixth Amendment. passim

Seventh Amendment. 19

UCMJ ARTICLES

Article 16(b)(1), UCMJ..... 3

Article 25a, UCMJ.. 26

Article 52(b)(2), UCMJ..... passim

Article 62..... 6

Article 66(b), UCMJ. 6

Article 67, UCMJ. 6

Article 134, UCMJ. 4

STATUTES (Non-UCMJ)

Articles of War. 19-20, 26

Statutes-at-Large

 12 Stat. 736, § 30 (1863).. 20

 39 Stat. 619, 650 et seq. (1916)..... 20

 115 Stat. 1124 (2001). 27

28 U.S.C. § 1651(a), All Writs Act. 5

OTHER AUTHORITIES

1 Journals of the Continental Congress (1774-1789).....	17
DA Pam. 27-9, Military Judges' Benchbook	37
Declaration of Independence (1776).	20
Famous Trials: Boston Massacre Trials (1770).....	18
Hamilton, Federalist No. 78.	13
Lederer, From Rome to the Military Justice Acts of 2016 and beyond: Continuing Civilianization of the Military Criminal Legal System , 225 Mil. L. Rev. 512 (2017).	12
Lichtman, The Justices and the Generals: A Critical Examination of the U.S. Supreme Court's Tradition of Deference to the Military, 1918-2004 , 65 Md. L. Rev. 907 (2006).	20
Manual for Courts-Martial (2019).	8
Mazur, Rehnquist's Vietnam: Constitutional Separatism and the Stealth Advance of Martial Law , 77 Indiana L. J. 701 (2002).	10-11
Monea, Reforming Military Juries in the Wake of Ramos v. Louisiana , LXVI Naval L. Rev. 67 (2020).	30
RCM 905.	7
Ruzic, Military Justice and the Supreme Court's Outdated Standard of Deference: Weiss v. United States , 70 Chi.-Kent L. Rev. 265 (1994).	11
Sherman, The Civilianization of Military Law , 22 Maine L. Rev. 3 (1970).	12
Strassfeld, The Vietnam War on Trial: The Court-Martial of Dr. Howard B. Levy , 1994 Wis. L. Rev. 839.....	10

VanLandingham, Ordering Injustice: Congress, Command Corruption of Courts-martial, and the Constitution, 49 Hofstra L. Rev. 211 (2020)... 21, 30

Winthrop, Military Law and Precedents, (2nd ed., 1920 Reprint ed.).. 19

TO THE JUDGES OF
THE UNITED STATES ARMY
COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS

INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE

The National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers (NACDL) is a nonprofit voluntary professional bar association that works on behalf of criminal defense attorneys to ensure justice and due process for those accused of crime or misconduct. NACDL was founded in 1958. It has a nationwide membership of many thousands of direct members, and up to 40,000 with affiliates. NACDL’s members include private criminal defense lawyers, public defenders, military defense counsel, law professors, and judges. NACDL is the only nationwide professional bar association for all criminal defense lawyers.

NACDL is keenly interested in military justice in general, and on behalf of its military criminal defense counsel members. NACDL is dedicated to advancing the proper, efficient, and just administration of justice to include military justice issues. NACDL files numerous amicus briefs each year in the U.S. Supreme Court and other federal (to include military) and state courts, seeking to provide amicus assistance in cases that present issues of broad importance to criminal defendants—to include military defendants—especially where there are constitutional issues, such as presented in this case.

Finally, the decision that precipitated the “unanimous verdict” issue here, Ramos v. Louisiana, 140 S. Ct. 1390 (2020), was argued by NACDL member, Jeffrey L. Fisher, Esq., and NACDL itself (along with numerous other amici curiae) filed an amicus brief in Ramos.¹ NACDL’s interest in this issue continues because members of our Armed Forces accused and tried by courts-martial under the Uniform Code of Military Justice [UCMJ] are not second-class citizens and do not forfeit their Sixth Amendment rights upon donning a uniform of our Armed Forces.

Pursuant to Joint CCA Rule 22(c), our amicus curiae brief “bring[s] relevant matter to the attention of the Court not already brought to its attention by the parties” First, there is an underlying procedural issue, viz., who bears the burden of proof? Here that burden was on the government, not the Real Party in Interest [RPI], as the Military Judge below erroneously held.

Second, the substantive issue, i.e., does the Sixth Amendment’s guarantee of a unanimous verdict in a criminal case, apply to non-capital courts-martial convened under the UCMJ? The Military Judge below ruled that it did not but did apply under the Fifth Amendment’s “equal protection” principles. He rejected the premise that Ramos v. Louisiana, 140 S.Ct. 1390 (2020) decided, viz., that unanimity is a constitutional component of impartiality.² Yet, virtually all other significant Sixth Amendment guarantees have been incorporated within military jurisprudence, as we demonstrate below. The issue respectfully needs to be resolved, but this case does not offer an appropriate vehicle to do so as discussed below.³

¹ These may be accessed via the Court’s website for the Ramos case; available at: <https://www.supremecourt.gov/search.aspx?filename=/docket/docketfiles/html/public/18-5924.html> [Last accessed: 7 March 2022].

Our amicus brief, while addressing the issue of the UCMJ’s non-unanimity provisions for non-capital cases, does not duplicate the Real Party in Interest’s [RPI] nor other amici curiae arguments. NACDL takes a different path in arriving at the same conclusion—non-unanimous verdicts in non-capital courts-martial violate the Sixth Amendment. NACDL’s position is that Congress, when enacting Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, statutorily provided for non-unanimous verdicts—as in Ramos, i.e., by “the concurrence of at least three-fourths of the members present when the vote is taken,”⁴—which contravenes what the Constitution commands, viz., a unanimous verdict.

² In fairness, the Military Judge’s conclusion may have been due to how the Sixth Amendment issue was framed. The issue is not as the government suggests, whether servicemembers accused of serious crimes are entitled to a “jury trial,” but more narrowly, whether a verdict by the Members of a non-capital court-martial must be unanimous as a component of impartiality.

³ To head off an anticipated argument that this Court is bound by CAAF precedents, that is generally true. But, here, the question is more nuanced—did Ramos abrogate those amorphous CAAF precedents? Amicus suggests that no subordinate federal court—civilian or military—can deflect or ignore the Supreme Court’s constitutional decisions.

⁴ Article 16(b)(1), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 816(b)(1), mandates a panel of 8 members.

I. PRELIMINARY MATTERS.

A. The Specified Issue Improvidently Seeks an “Advisory Opinion.”

First, NACDL agrees with the Government’s position in their Brief on Specified Issue, at 3, that:

The Real Party in Interest [RPI] is not charged under Clause 3 of the General Article 134, UCMJ, but rather under Clause 2 where his conduct was “of a nature to bring discredit upon the armed forces.” (Gov’t App. Ex. 1). Therefore, the specified issue goes beyond the facts of this case and was not at issue before the military judge when he issued his ruling. Without a genuine controversy for this court to address, any opinion regarding Clause 3 of General Article 134, UCMJ, would be advisory. [Citations omitted].

See generally, United States v. Fruehauf, 365 U.S. 146, 157 (1961)[Advisory opinions]; Flast v. Cohen, 392 U.S. 83, 95 (1968)[prohibition against advisory opinions]; and United States v. Chisholm, 59 M.J. 151, 152 (CAAF 2003)[“An advisory opinion is an opinion issued by a court on a matter that does not involve a justiciable case or controversy between adverse parties.”].

Here, the Specified Issue, as framed, calls for an advisory opinion that has no relevance to the facts and circumstances of this case.

B. Whether This Court Has Jurisdiction is a Substantial Issue.

In its Writ Petition, the government asserts jurisdiction as follows:

This court has jurisdiction over this case pursuant to the All Writs Act, which grants power to “all courts established by Act of Congress [to] issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of their respective jurisdiction and agreeable to the usages and principles of law.” 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a). This case meets the Act’s required criteria, as (1) the requested writ is “in aid of the court’s existing jurisdiction,” and (2) the requested writ is “necessary or appropriate.” [Citation omitted; emphasis added].

Petition at 3. There are two fundamental problems with the government’s asserted jurisdictional basis. First, the All Writs Act [AWA], 28 U.S.C. §1651(a), is a remedial statute, not a jurisdictional statute. Second, there is no “existing jurisdiction” in this Court for the relief that the government now seeks.

1. The AWA Does Not Confer Jurisdiction.

In Pennsylvania Bureau of Corrections v. U.S. Marshals Service, 474 U.S. 34, 43 (1985), the Court noted:

The All Writs Act is a residual source of authority to issue writs that are not otherwise covered by statute. Where a statute specifically addresses the particular issue at hand, it is that authority, and not the All Writs Act, that is controlling. Although that Act empowers federal courts to fashion extraordinary remedies when the need arises, it does not authorize them to issue ad hoc writs whenever compliance with statutory procedures appears inconvenient or less appropriate.

In the context of military jurisprudence, the Court in Clinton v. Goldsmith, 526 U.S. 529 (1999), significantly limited military practice under the AWA. While focusing on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces (CAAF), its rationale likewise applies here. As the Court held:

Thus, although military appellate courts are among those empowered to issue extraordinary writs under the Act, see Noyd v. Bond, 395 U.S. 683, 695, n. 7, (1969), the express terms of the Act confine the power of the CAAF to issuing process “in aid of” its existing statutory jurisdiction; the Act does not enlarge that jurisdiction. [Emphasis added; citations omitted⁵].

Id. at 534-35. As noted in Goldsmith, CAAF’s jurisdiction was/is established by Article 67, UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 867. Likewise, this Court’s jurisdiction is both created by and limited to the provisions assigned in Article 66(b), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 866(b), as it existed at the time of the RPI’s alleged offenses. There is no provision in Article 66, UCMJ, granting interlocutory jurisdiction to this Court regardless of the government’s arguments. Cf., HV v. United States, 75 M.J. 331, 333 (CAAF 2016): “it is axiomatic that the All Writs Act is not an independent source of jurisdiction. It does not expand this Court’s jurisdiction, but only operates ‘in aid of’ our existing statutory jurisdiction.” [Emphasis added].

2. Article 62, UCMJ, Does Not Confer Jurisdiction.

The only other potential statutory basis for jurisdiction to attach in this case is Article 62(a)(1), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 862(a)(1), as applicable to certain specified governmental interlocutory appeals. While it may seem logical to pigeonhole interlocutory appeals such as the government seeks to do herein, the simple and incontrovertible fact remains—Congress did not include such appeals within the parameters of Article 62, UCMJ. The language of the statute limits itself and the AWA cannot expand it. Syngenta Crop Protection, Inc. v. Henson, 537 U.S. 28, 33 (2002)[“the All Writs Act does not confer jurisdiction on the federal courts. . . .”]. This is particularly true in the case of Article I, courts.

⁵ Citing inter alia, Pennsylvania Bureau of Corrections supra.

II. THE MILITARY JUDGE’S DECISION BELOW.⁶

The decision at issue here is the military judge’s finding that:

[T]he Fifth Amendment Equal Protection guarantee require[s] a unanimous verdict of guilty in a military court-martial given that every state and the Federal government (except for the U.S. military) requires a unanimous verdict to secure a criminal conviction.⁷

He rejected two other bases for unanimity in courts-martial verdicts, holding that:

1. [T]he Sixth Amendment jury trial right [does not] include the requirement for a unanimous verdict of guilty in a military court-martial in light of the Supreme Court’s holding in Ramos v. Louisiana, 140 S. Ct. 1390 (2020); and
2. [T]he Fifth Amendment Due Process clause [does not] require a unanimous verdict of guilty to meet the prosecution’s burden of proving guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

NACDL addresses all three arguments below.

⁶ United States v. Dial, Decision by Military Judge Pritchard (3 January 2022), [hereinafter, “MJ Decision at ___”].

⁷ Id. at 1.

A. The Burden of Proof.

The MJ Decision at 2, concluded that: “The burden of proof and persuasion rests with the Defense as the moving party,” citing Rules for Courts-Martial (RCM) 905(c)(1) and (c)(2)(A), Manual for Courts-Martial (2019) [MCM]. With due respect, the military judge erred. RCM 905(c)(1), entitled Burden of Proof, reads in full:

(1) Standard. Unless otherwise provided in this Manual, the burden of proof on any factual issue the resolution of which is necessary to decide a motion shall be by a preponderance of the evidence. [Emphasis added]

RCM 905(c)(2)(A), reads in full:

(A) Except as otherwise provided in this Manual the burden of persuasion on any factual issue the resolution of which is necessary to decide a motion shall be on the moving party. [Emphasis added].

The error here is that the issue sub judice is not a “factual issue,” but rather is a question of law. While generically correct, within the factual context of RPI’s pretrial unanimity Motion, it was clearly erroneous as a matter of law. It ignored valid precedents from the Court of Military Appeals [CMA] and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces [CAAF], “[T]he burden of showing that military conditions require a different rule than that prevailing in the civilian community is upon the party arguing for a different rule.” Courtney v. Williams, 1 M.J. 267, 270 (CMA 1976), citing Kauffmann v. Sec’y Air Force, 415 F.2d 991 (DC Cir. 1969), cert.

denied 396 U.S. 1013 (1970); and quoted in United States v. Easton, 71 M.J. 168, 175 (CAAF 2012). Here, that burden was on the government, not the Accused/RPI, as the Military Judge held below. The Military Judge was bound by the precedents of CMA/CAAF—a foundational issue which respectfully must be addressed.

B. The “Separate Society” Analysis Below Is Erroneous.

The MJ Decision at 3, discussing the claim that because the military is “a specialized society separate from civilian society . . . ”⁸ a different rule should apply in the context of this case. Justice Rehnquist’s opinion in Parker is the drum that the government beats on every challenge made to the UCMJ or Manual for Courts-Martial, and has become a mantra for courts (and courts-martial) to deny relief, as did the Military Judge below. But, it is not the talisman the government claims it to be.

The Court first used the “specialized” community or society concept in Orloff v. Willoughby, 345 U.S. 83, 94 (1953), when it stated, “The military constitutes a specialized community governed by a separate discipline from that of the civilian.” Shortly after Orloff was decided, the Court decided Burns v. Wilson, 346 U.S. 137 (1953)(plurality) and stated: “The military courts, like the state courts, have the same responsibilities as do the federal courts to protect a person from a violation of his constitutional rights.” Id. at 142. A majority of the Justices did not dispute this premise. Hence, the import of Ramos here.

⁸ Quoting Parker v. Levy, 417 U.S. 733, 743 (1974) [citing United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, 350 U.S. 11, 17 (1955)].

From a historical perspective, at one point the “specialized community” concept may have been true, viz., in the earlier days of our Republic when Army posts were literally on the frontiers of society, and days away from supplies or to higher headquarters. The Army and Navy’s enlisted corps were mostly uneducated and oft-times “encouraged” to enlist to avoid judicial action by civilian courts. Since the advent of the All Volunteer Force, to cargo planes being able to resupply remote outposts in hours, to virtual instantaneous electronic and digital communication, that premise is a “relic of a bygone era.” Lehnhausen v. Lake Shore Auto Parts Co., 410 U.S. 356, 365 (1973).

Parker v. Levy relied upon Orloff, but that reliance was distorted.. Law Professor (and former Air Force judge advocate), Diane Mazur, addressed the Parker “problem” in a detailed law review article.⁹ She notes:

[In Parker, Justice] Rehnquist reached back to the Orloff v. Willoughby of his clerkship and rewrote—in fact misrepresented the language of that opinion in order to substantiate a presumption of judicial deference to all exercises of military discretion. Rehnquist took a case that had relied on uncontroversial principles of constitutional separation of powers and transformed it into one that relied instead on the Vietnam-era cultural division between those who supported the military and those who did not. In Orloff v. Willoughby, Justice Jackson had made the relatively simple observation that the military was a “specialized community governed by a separate discipline,” referring to the Article I delegation of power that permits Congress to make rules for the internal governance of the military. Rehnquist cited the authority but changed its language, stating that the Court “has long recognized that the military is, by necessity, a specialized society separate from civilian society” and “a society apart from civilian society.”¹⁰

⁹ Mazur, Rehnquist's Vietnam: Constitutional Separatism and the Stealth Advance of Martial Law, 77 Indiana L. J. 701 (2002), [available online at: <https://www.repository.law.indiana.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1911&context=ilj>] [last accessed: 8 March 2022]; accord, Strassfeld, The Vietnam War on Trial: The Court-Martial of Dr. Howard B. Levy, 1994 Wis. L. Rev. 839, 945.

The government continues this inaccurate deviation from Orloff’s actual holding.

Another legal commentator has addressed this from a different perspective:

This “separate society” view, however, is no longer an accurate view of the modern day military establishment. In its present peacetime form, the military functions much like a large civilian corporation, with officers playing the role of managers and enlisted personnel playing the role of employees. Both the public’s and the Supreme Court’s perceptions, however, have not caught up with the changes in the military. Not that the military’s system of disciplinary rules is separate and distinct from the rules that control in civilian courts, but that military society itself is separate from civilian society, and that this in and of itself requires civilian courts to forego review of military decisions.¹¹

That author also notes, “[t]he only right from which servicemembers are expressly excluded is the right to indictment by a grand jury.” Id. at 284.

The late Justice Ginsburg, concurring in Weiss v. United States, 510 U.S. 163, ¹⁰ Mazur, supra at 743 [emphasis added; footnotes omitted].

¹¹ Ruzic, Military Justice and the Supreme Court’s Outdated Standard of Deference: Weiss v. United States, 70 Chi.-Kent L. Rev. 265 (1994).

194 (1994)(Ginsburg, J., concurring), also recognized this, observing:

The care the Court has taken to analyze petitioners' claims demonstrates once again that men and women in the Armed Forces do not leave constitutional safeguards and judicial protection behind when they enter military service. Today's decision upholds a system of military justice notably more sensitive to due process concerns than the one prevailing through most of our country's history, when military justice was done without any requirement that legally trained officers preside or even participate as judges. [emphasis added].

One must then ask, where in the Constitution or Bill of Rights are our servicemembers exempted from unanimous verdicts? Cf., the Grand Jury Clauses of the Fifth Amendment.

There is critical, scholarly analysis of the premise for “civilizing” military justice. Law professor and retired Army JAG Colonel, Fredric Lederer, acknowledges: “the modern history of military criminal law largely is defined by its increasing civilianization.”¹² He continues by noting: “[T]he policy justifications traditionally used to defend a military criminal legal system that is separate and distinct from civilian law increasingly appear less compelling than in the past.” Id. at 512-13. This assumes that the military justice system is indeed “separate and distinct”—in general, that cliché is simply no longer true.¹³

¹² Lederer, From Rome to the Military Justice Acts of 2016 and beyond: Continuing Civilianization of the Military Criminal Legal System, 225 Mil. L. Rev. 512 (2017). But see, Sherman, The Civilianization of Military Law, 22 Maine L. Rev. 3 (1970).

C. The Military “Deference” Doctrine is Inapplicable Where the Issue is of Constitutional Dimension—Dealing With Deference: Judges versus Congress.

The MJ Decision at 3-4, concludes that courts must defer to Congressional enactments regulating military justice—again, relying heavily on Parker v. Levy. But, it is beyond cavil that during our Nation’s existence Congress has passed numerous statutes that were ultimately held unconstitutional.¹⁴

Hamilton, in Federalist No. 78, noted: “liberty can have nothing to fear from the judiciary alone, but would have every thing to fear from its union with either of the other departments. . . .”¹⁵ He went on to state:

It is far more rational to suppose, that the courts were designed to be an intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by the judges, as a fundamental law. It therefore belongs to them to ascertain its meaning, as well as the meaning of any particular act proceeding from the legislative body. Id.

¹³ See, e.g., Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 24 n.44 (1957), “The Common Law made no distinction between the crimes of soldiers and those of civilians in time of peace.” See also, Article 36(a), UCMJ, where Congress delegated to the President the power “so far as he considers practicable, [to] apply the principles of law and the rules of evidence generally recognized in the trial of criminal cases in the United States district courts”

¹⁴ For a comprehensive listing of laws held unconstitutional, see generally: <https://constitution.congress.gov/resources/unconstitutional-laws/>. [Last accessed: 8 March 2022].

¹⁵ Available through the Library of Congress’s website at: <https://guides.loc.gov/federalist-papers/full-text> [Last accessed: 8 March 2022].

That was the premise for Chief Justice Marshall’s opinion in Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. (1 Cr.) 139 (1803). Here, the question is simply, what deference is due to Congress when it enacts a statute in direct conflict with the Constitution, such as Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ? The answer is—none. Marbury’s famous conclusion declared, “a law repugnant to the constitution is void.” Id. at 180.

D. Ex Parte Quirin is Inapplicable in This Case.¹⁶

In his Sixth Amendment analysis, the military judge relied heavily upon Quirin. Respectfully, that was error as that case had nothing to do with courts-martial. Quirin [the Nazi Saboteurs case] was a military commissions case where the defendants challenged their detention and trial by a military commission. The Court held that the military commission had jurisdiction under the “laws of war” to proceed with their trial. While they argued that they were entitled to trial in the civilian courts, the Court rejected their claims.¹⁷ But, the issue was jurisdiction, not unanimity. The following language from the Court’s decision has been distorted to apply to courts-martial:

[W]e must conclude that § 2 of Article III and the Fifth and Sixth Amendments cannot be taken to have extended the right to demand a jury to trials by military commission, or to have required that offenses against the law of war not triable by jury at common law be tried only in the civil courts. [emphasis added].

¹⁶ 317 U.S. 1 (1942).

¹⁷ Of note, one of the civilian co-defendants to the military defendants in Quirin, was indicted and tried in federal court: Haupt v. United States, 330 U.S. 631 (1947). Justice Scalia in Hamdi v. Rumsfeld, 542 U.S. 507, 569 (2004)(Scalia, J., dissenting) characterized the holding in Quirin as “not this Court’s finest hour.” His observation remains apt.

Id. at 40. Such a broad extrapolation to courts-martial simply was not warranted. Reid v. Covert warned in 1957: “As yet it has not been clearly settled to what extent the Bill of Rights and other protective parts of the Constitution apply to military trials.” 354 U.S. at 37. Ramos has now settled the issue in the context of a Constitutional command for unanimous verdicts in courts-martial for serious offenses. The only criminal jurisdiction in the United States providing for non-unanimous verdicts are prosecutions under the UCMJ, and then only for serious, but non-capital offenses. The culprit here is Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 852(a)(3), which is the statutory (not constitutional) basis for non-unanimous verdicts: is it constitutional in a post-Ramos environment?

E. Stare Decisis Does Not Save the Day.

Again, how the issue is framed is the proverbial tail wagging the dog. As the MJ Decision at 7, stated: “The Defense acknowledges this Court is bound by precedent regarding the applicability of the Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial” That however misstates the issue which is not an accused servicemember’s having a right to a “jury trial,”¹⁸ but, rather, the right to a unanimous verdict by the Members of a court-martial panel when they are acting as the fact-finder in non-capital cases. There is no vertical precedent binding on this Court—neither CAAF nor the Supreme Court have addressed the continuing constitutionality of Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 852(a)(3), and thus, nothing applicable under any stare decisis principle.

¹⁸ “[T]his Court cannot and will not depart from binding precedent holding the right to a jury (continued...)”

III. INTRODUCTION—NACDL’S POSITION IN SUPPORT OF THE RPI.

This case raises significant constitutional questions. Specifically, the issues here address the interrelationships between the “Make Rules” and “Necessary and Proper” Clauses of Article I, § 8, U.S. Const.; the “Jury Trial” Clause of Article III, § 2; the Fifth Amendment’s “Due Process” Clause¹⁹ as to fundamental fairness; the Fifth Amendment’s “Grand Jury” clauses; and the Sixth Amendment’s right to an “impartial jury;” all as applied to U.S. servicemembers facing trial by courts-martial for serious offenses.²⁰

More specifically, the issue here is not only the interplay between the Constitutional provisions noted above, but their application to the Congressional exercise of its legislative power in enacting the UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 801 et seq. Congress—without any Constitutional exemption such as the Fifth Amendment’s trial inapplicable to military courts-martial.” MJ Decision at 7.

¹⁸ (...continued)

¹⁹ This includes “equal protection.” Bolling v. Sharpe, 347 U.S. 497 (1954), and its progeny.

²⁰ As opposed to “petty offenses.” See, e.g., Lewis v. United States, 518 U.S. 322, 323-34 (1996)[“The Sixth Amendment’s guarantee of the right to a jury trial does not extend to petty offenses”]

Grand Jury exclusions for the military—is directly responsible for creating a non-unanimous verdict procedure for non-capital convictions by courts-martial. In Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 852(a)(3), Congress expressly authorized non-unanimous verdicts in non-capital courts-martial by a three-fourth’s percentage. Yet, the next section, Article 52(b)(2), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 852(b)(2), mandates a unanimous verdict by 12 members in capital cases. While the adage “death is different” is true in a capital case, NACDL submits that where, e.g., the UCMJ provides for a sentence of life without parole (or its functional equivalent), to allow such to be premised on a non-unanimous verdict by 3/4 of the voting members, is and must be unconstitutional in any system advocating justice.

The broad constitutional question here is: Is the “Make Rules” Clause in Article I, § 8, of the Constitution subject to the subsequently ratified Sixth Amendment’s incorporated right to a unanimous verdict under Ramos?²¹

²¹ The Military Judge’s reliance upon a military commission case (discussed above) was misplaced. Likewise, older CMA/CAAF decisions discussing Sixth Amendment “jury trial” rights, paint the issue with too broad of a brush. The Grand Jury clauses are inapplicable as the RPI made no claims to such below. Furthermore, the underlying issue surrounding the scope of the Sixth Amendment’s inapplicability is not about fundamental fairness or unanimity. Rather, it is the vicinage clause that Amicus agrees is inapplicable to courts-martial. As originally understood:

[One] great right is that of trial by jury. This provides, that neither life, liberty nor property, can be taken from the possessor, until twelve of his unexceptionable countrymen and peers of his vicinage, who from that neighbourhood may reasonably be supposed to be acquainted with his character, and the characters of the witnesses, upon a fair trial, and full

(continued...)

A. The Unanimity Issue Through a Different Lens.

NACDL has no disagreement with the RPI's framing of his Sixth Amendment, unanimity issue. But, we suggest that there is a narrower way to examine that issue from a constitutional perspective. NACDL posits that the better approach here is to examine the source of the problem, viz., the provision in the UCMJ, which expressly allows a non-unanimous verdict in non-capital courts-martial. Thus, we would frame the issue substantially as follows:

Is Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 852(a)(3), which permits non-unanimous verdicts by only a three-fourths majority, in non-capital courts-martial involving serious offenses, unconstitutional under Ramos v. Louisiana?

To properly address this approach, some historical discussion is warranted.

B. Historical Context

Prior to the Founding, when the Colonies were under both British rule and military occupation, where what we would today classify as general “common law” crimes—murder, robbery, burglary, etc.,—even when committed by uniformed members of the British Army, Soldiers were tried in British civilian courts in the American

²¹ (...continued)
enquiry, face to face, in open Court, before as many of the people as chuse to attend, shall pass their sentence upon oath against him. . . .”

¹ Journals of the Continental Congress (1774-1789), as quoted in Richmond Newspapers, Inc. v. Virginia, 448 U.S. 555, 568-68 (1980).

Colonies—not in British courts-martial—which afforded the defendants the right to a unanimous verdict. The most famous example of this practice was John Adams’ defense of the British Soldiers in both of the so-called “Boston Massacre” cases.²² That practice continued when the Continental Congress enacted the first American Articles of War, essentially adopting the British version in our pre-Constitutional jurisprudence, i.e., general, non-military offenses were tried in civilian courts.²³ That procedure existed until the early 20th Century.

Indeed, the Seventh Amendment, which likewise provides for an “impartial jury” in civil cases has long been interpreted as requiring unanimous verdicts.²⁴ See, American Publ’g Co. v. Fisher, 166 U.S. 464, 468 (1897)[a civil suit], where the ²² See generally, Famous Trials: Boston Massacre Trials (1770), available at: <https://famous-trials.com/massacre> [Last accessed: 7 March 2022].

²³ This was clarified in the American Articles of War (1776), Section X, Article I, which provided in relevant part:

Whenever any officer or soldier shall be accused of a capital crime, or of having used violence, or committed any offense against the persons or property of the good people of any of the United American States, such as is punishable by the known laws of the land, the commanding officer . . . [is] hereby required, upon application duly made by or in behalf of the party or parties injured, to use his utmost endeavors to deliver over such accused person or persons to the civil magistrate; and likewise to be aiding and assisting to the officers of justice in apprehending and securing the person or persons so accused, in order to bring them to a trial. [Emphasis added].

Winthrop, Military Law and Precedents, 964 (2nd ed., 1920 Reprint ed.).

²⁴ While not expressly applicable to criminal trials (or courts-martial), it is relevant to the Drafter’s thoughts and philosophies regarding unanimous verdicts.

Court held:

[U]nanimity was one of the peculiar and essential features of trial by jury at the common law. No authorities are needed to sustain this proposition. Whatever may be true as to legislation which changes any mere details of a jury trial, it is clear that a statute which destroys this substantial and essential feature thereof is one abridging the right. It follows, therefore, that the court erred in receiving a verdict returned by only nine jurors, the others not concurring. [Emphasis added].

Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, is such a statute. Or, as the Court concluded in Stogner v. California, 539 U.S. 607, 632 (2003), “It is difficult to believe that the Constitution grants greater protection . . . to property than to human liberty.” Human liberty is the issue here.

In 1916, Congress radically overhauled the Articles of War to include virtually all forms of crime—common law and military. 39 Stat. 619, 650 et seq. (1916).²⁵ While it was (and continues to be) the assumption that Congress has plenary power under the Make Rules Clause of Article I, § 8, and the genesis for the “military deference” concept,²⁶ that assumption is misguided—if not demonstrably wrong when applied to ²⁵ Thus, military cases decided prior to 1916, would have no occasion to address the proper jurisdictional parameters of non-military offenses as they generally were not tried by courts-martial, in the United States. However, during the Civil War, Congress had expanded courts-martial jurisdiction committed “in time of war, insurrection, or rebellion . . .” for serious felonies. 12 Stat. 736, § 30 (1863).

²⁶ See, e.g., Lichtman, The Justices and the Generals: A Critical Examination of the U.S. Supreme Court's Tradition of Deference to the Military, 1918-2004, 65 Md. L. Rev. 907 (2006); explaining that “the Court has a long history of deferring to military judgment. While other litigants core, constitutional rights.
(continued...) ”

One of the complaints against the British King made in our Declaration of Independence (1776), was that “He has affected to render the military independent, of, and superior to the civil power.” Thus, it is clear that judicial “deference” to the military was a toxic concept to the Founding Fathers. This is especially so since it comes just a few clauses after the complaint that the King “has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing to assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.”²⁷

In, Reid v. Covert 354 U.S. 1, 24 n.44 (1957), the Court observed: “The Common Law made no distinction between the crimes of soldiers and those of civilians in time of peace. All subjects were tried alike by the same civil courts.” The Court went on to say:

²⁶ (...continued)
are often required to submit proof of whatever assertions they are making before the Court, the Justices invariably accept arguments put forth by the military without subjecting them to constitutional scrutiny.” Id.

²⁷ While the Declaration does not carry the force of law—see Gulf, C.&S. F. Ry. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U.S. 150 (1897)—it is powerful evidence of the legal thinking and philosophy of the time, and not at all remote from the Constitution’s ratification in 1789. That decision aptly notes:

[I]t is always safe to read the letter of the constitution in the spirit of the Declaration of Independence. No duty rests more imperatively upon the courts than the enforcement of those constitutional provisions intended to secure that equality of rights which is the foundation of free government.

Id. at 160.

[I]t is not surprising that the Declaration of Independence protested that George III had ‘affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil Power’ and that Americans had been deprived in many cases of ‘the benefits of Trial by Jury.’ And those who adopted the Constitution embodied their profound fear and distrust of military power, as well as their determination to protect trial by jury, in the Constitution and its Amendments. [footnote omitted].

Id. at 29.

IV. SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

. . . *Congress cannot legislate away the Constitution.*²⁸

NACDL, as amicus curiae, submits that Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, which authorizes non-unanimous verdicts by three-fourths of the voting members in a court-martial for serious offenses, is unconstitutional on its face. First, military law has long recognized that a military accused has a right to “a fair and impartial panel” which is “a matter of due process” under the Fifth Amendment. United States v. Wiesen, 56 M.J. 172, 174 (CAAF 2001). That is because “[i]mpartial court members are the sine qua non for a fair court-martial.” United States v. Modesto, 43 M.J. 315, 318 (CAAF 1995).

Additionally, there is a long judicial history of “incorporating” various other Sixth Amendment rights into our military justice system—without damaging discipline, justice, or national security. With the exception of verdict unanimity, CAAF recognizes that most Sixth Amendment rights apply to courts-martial under the UCMJ, as noted in detail below. With the exceptions of the Grand Jury Clauses in the Fifth Amendment and the Vicinage Clause in the Sixth,²⁹ all of the trial rights in the Sixth Amendment—with the exception being unanimous verdicts—are already incorporated into military practice.

²⁸ VanLandingham, Ordering Injustice: Congress, Command Corruption of Courts-martial, and the Constitution, 49 Hofstra L. Rev. 211, 212 (2020).

While disorder and chaos have not infected the ranks due to the incorporation of other Sixth Amendment rights, an over-expansive premise has long infected military law, i.e., “courts-martial have never been considered subject to the jury-trial demands of the Constitution.” McClain, 22 M.J. at 128. That conclusion is accurate only if limited to the Vicinage Clauses of Article III, § 2, and the Sixth Amendment.³⁰ However, McClain’s conclusions are not accurate today. While giving Congress its due under the “Make Rules” and “Necessary and Proper” clauses of the Constitution, there is an important caveat to that admittedly broad power: “Congress, of course, is subject to the requirements of the Due Process Clause when legislating in the area of military affairs, and that Clause provides some measure of protection to defendants ²⁹ Amicus suggests that this clause is most likely the basis for the long-standing claims that the Sixth Amendment’s Jury Trial Clause does not apply to courts-martial. See, e.g., United States v. McClain, 22 M.J. 124, 128 (CMA 1986). But, the Supreme Court has never squarely held that the Sixth Amendment’s Jury Trial Clause is inapplicable to courts-martial.

³⁰ The Grand Jury Clauses are expressly excluded from military practice, and in any event, have nothing to do with unanimous verdicts.

in military proceedings.” Weiss v. United States, 510 U.S. 163, 176 (1994).

In a subtle, but significant change, CAAF in United States v. Lambert, 55 M.J. 293, 295 (CAAF 2001) held:

[T]he Sixth Amendment requirement that the jury be impartial applies to court-martial members and covers not only the selection of individual jurors, but also their conduct during the trial proceedings and the subsequent deliberations. [citation and internal footnote omitted] This case involves the latter aspect of impartiality

Its holding that the Sixth Amendment’s requirement of impartiality applies to courts-martial is the key to opening the military courthouse doors, which in turn, mandates following Ramos. As Justice Gorsuch stated in writing for the Court in Ramos, “. . . the term ‘trial by an impartial jury’ carried with it some meaning about the content and requirements of a jury trial. One of these requirements was unanimity.” 140 S. Ct. at 1395. [emphasis added].

CAAF’s decision in Lambert, coupled with Ramos’s holding that from a constitutional perspective, impartiality means unanimity for criminal verdicts in serious cases, must likewise mandate unanimous court-martial verdicts. This Court respectfully should declare Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ’s non-unanimity provision, unconstitutional on its face.

V. ARGUMENT

Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 852(a)(3), which permits non-unanimous verdicts by only a three-fourths majority, in non-capital courts-martial involving serious offenses, is unconstitutional under Ramos v. Louisiana.

While Article I, § 8, cl. 14, gives Congress the power to “make rules for the government and regulation” of our Armed Forces, and the “Necessary and Proper” Clause provides the constitutional authorization, as relevant here, for Congress to enact the UCMJ, including Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, that alone does not answer the constitutional question presented. As Weiss held, Congress is also “subject to the requirements of the Due Process Clause when legislating in the area of military affairs. . . .” 510 U.S. at 176. There can be no debate that in enacting Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, Congress was “legislating in the area of military affairs.” That then raises the question: is the non-unanimous verdict procedure for non-capital, but serious military offenses, fundamentally fair under the Fifth Amendment—as well as any Sixth Amendment analysis?

In United States v. Roland, 50 M.J. 66, 68 (CAAF 1999), the Court held:

[T]he military defendant does not have a right to a jury selected from the civilian community. [citations omitted] But, the military defendant does have a right to members who are fair and impartial. [citing, Wainwright v. Witt, 469 U.S. 412 (1985); and Chandler v. Florida, 449 U.S. 560 (1981)].

See also United States v. Clay, 1 C.M.R. 74 (CMA 1951), discussing “military due process.” To properly analyze fundamental fairness within the court-martial process, requires one to examine the nature of a court-martial under our UCMJ.

A. U.S. Courts-Martial Have Been Considered “Judicial” for Almost 135 Years: The Impact of Ortiz.³¹

In Runkle v. United States, 122 U.S. 543, 557 (1887), a back-pay suit by a military officer convicted by a General Court-Martial [GCM], but, not acted upon by the President as procedurally required, the court held, “the action required of the president is judicial in its character, not administrative.” [emphasis added]. Thus, the Court’s decision in Ortiz should have been no surprise to anyone familiar with the history of American military justice.

Ortiz did not appear in the legal universe from a vacuum, as Runkle illustrates. In the Sixth Amendment environment, the former Court of Military Appeals held in United States v. Jacoby, 29 C.M.R. 244, 249 (CMA 1960), in the context of confrontation [a precursor to Crawford]: “it was provided in Article 10, Articles of War, 1786, that depositions might be taken in cases not capital, “provided the prosecutor and person accused are present at the taking of the same.” So, there is a long history of applying civilian trial rights to courts-martial. See also, Article 36(a), UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 836(a).

The Ortiz Court held: “The military justice system's essential character—in a word, [is] judicial” 138 S. Ct. at 2174. Thus, “procedural protections” should, by definition, include unanimity in verdicts. The Court then made an interesting observation: “[C]ourts-martial today can try service members for a vast swath of offenses, including garden-variety crimes unrelated to military service. . . . The sentences meted out are also similar: Courts-martial can impose, on top of peculiarly military discipline, terms of imprisonment and capital punishment.” Id. at 2174-75. [emphasis added]. Of note, in 2001, Congress added Article 25a, UCMJ, 10 U.S.C. § 825a,³² to the UCMJ, which provided that where “the accused may be sentenced to death, the number of members shall be 12.” Thus, in the context of potential capital cases, Congress recognized (without Supreme Court “prodding”) the constitutional framework utilized in federal and state capital cases—a unanimous panel of 12. One of the goals of any principled system of criminal justice must be to avoid “wrongful convictions” and illegal sentences, something that unanimity promotes, and something that in non-capital cases the UCMJ forsakes without good reason.

³¹ Ortiz v. United States, 138 S. Ct. 2165 (2018).

Ortiz continued:

Each level of military court decides criminal “cases” as that term

³² 115 Stat. 1124. That occurred after NACDL filed an amicus curiae brief on behalf of an Army Petitioner who had been sentenced to death in United States v. Gray, 51 M.J. 1 (CAAF 1999), urging the Supreme Court to grant certiorari to determine whether a conviction and death sentence by an Army General Court-Martial with a panel of only six members was constitutional. Certiorari was denied at 532 U.S. 919 (2001). Habeas litigation continues; see, Gray v. Gray, 645 Fed.Appx. 624 (10th Cir. 2016) [Mem. Opn.]

is generally understood, and does so in strict accordance with a body of federal law (of course including the Constitution). The procedural protections afforded to a service member are “virtually the same” as those given in a civilian criminal proceeding, whether state or federal. [internal citation omitted; emphasis added].

138 S. Ct. at 2174.³³ “Strict accordance” with the Constitution, absent the express exemptions contained, e.g., in the Fifth Amendment’s “Grand Jury” clauses, necessarily implies unanimous verdicts—the very premise of Ramos. That is bolstered by Ortiz’s conclusion that: “[T]he judgments a military tribunal renders, as this Court long ago observed, ‘rest on the same basis, and are surrounded by the same considerations[, as] give conclusiveness to the judgments of other legal tribunals.’” [internal citation omitted]. Id.

But the Court did not stop there when it held: “The jurisdiction and structure of the court-martial system likewise resemble those of other courts whose decisions we review. . . .” Id. The one exception of note—at issue here—is the lack of unanimity in courts-martial verdicts; something not the case in other Article I, courts exercising criminal jurisdiction, e.g., Territorial Courts, the District of Columbia, etc.³⁴ Ortiz, 138 S. Ct. at 2168-69.

³³ But see Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U.S. 487, 500 (1885), [“Courts-martial form no part of the judicial system of the United States. . . .”] Kurtz is abrogated by Ortiz.

³⁴ The MJ Decision did not address this, but it supports his equal protection conclusion.

B. The Evolution of a “Fair Trial” in the Military.

Shortly after the UCMJ became effective in 1951, the then Court of Military Appeals [CMA] decided United States v. Clay, 1 C.M.R. 74 (CMA 1951), the seminal “military due process” case. There, the Court held:

There are certain standards in the military accusatorial system which have been specifically set by Congress and which we must demand be observed in the trials of military offenses. Some of these are more important than others, but all are of sufficient importance to be a significant part of military law. We conceive these rights to mold into a pattern similar to that developed in federal civilian cases. For lack of a more descriptive phrase, we label the pattern as “military due process” and then point up the minimum standards which are the framework for this concept and which must be met before the accused can be legally convicted. The Uniform Code of Military Justice, supra, contemplates that he be given a fair trial and it commands us to see that the proceedings in the courts below reach that standard. [Emphasis added]

Id. at 77. The Court went on to say: “[W]e believe Congress intended, in so far as reasonably possible, to place military justice on the same plane as civilian justice, and to free those accused by the military from certain vices which infested the old system.” Id. In the context of a unanimous verdict for non-capital cases, that language cannot be ignored.

Clay ended with the Court stating: “Previously adjudicated federal court cases are a source from which we can test the prejudicial effect of denying an accused the rights we have set out as our pattern of ‘military due process.’” 1 C.M.R. at 78.[emphasis added]. Ramos is such a “federal court” case from the Supreme Court, and “previously adjudicated” in the context of LTC Dial’s case.

In United States v. Jacoby, 29 C.M.R. 244, 247-48 (CMA 1960), the Court stated, “it is apparent that the protections in the Bill of Rights, except those which are expressly or by necessary implication inapplicable, are available to members of our armed forces.” [citations omitted]. Jacoby was a Sixth Amendment Confrontation Clause decision, predating Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004), by 44 years.

In Kauffman v. Sec’y Air Force, 415 F.2d 991 (DC Cir. 1969), cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1013 (1970), a case involving a court-martialed officer’s suit for back pay, the DC Circuit ruled: “We hold that the test of fairness requires that military rulings on constitutional issues conform to Supreme Court standards, unless it is shown that conditions peculiar to military life require a different rule.” Id. at 997. [footnote omitted]. Accord, Courtney v. Williams, 1 M.J. 267, 270 (CMA 1976)[paraphrasing Kauffman]. Or, as Professor (and retired USAF judge advocate) Rachel VanLandingham, in the context of unlawful command influence [UCI] astutely observes: “Procedural due process demands fairness in the procedures the government employs to deprive someone of their life, liberty, and property.”³⁵

There is no rational, much less constitutional, reason for non-unanimous verdicts

³⁵ VanLandingham, supra at 238.

for serious offenses tried by courts-martial.³⁶ Indeed, one military author notes that “in the twenty-first [Century], we know there is a great deal of value in an unanimity requirement for juries. Non-unanimous verdicts allow minority viewpoints to be ignored during deliberation, a hallmark of bad decision making.” [Footnote omitted].³⁷

C. The Sixth Amendment and Its Application to Military Justice.

*As it stands, a court-martial is now the only place in America where a criminal defendant can be convicted without consensus among the jury.*³⁸

The language in the “Make Rules” clause of Art. I, sec. 8, is somewhat peculiar. Starting with the premise that the Drafters knew what they were doing, word choices became important, and by giving Congress the authority to “Make Rules” pertaining to the military, that does not per se rise to the level of giving Congress the power to “make . . . laws” Congress's power here flows from the “Necessary and Proper” Clause of Art. I, § 8. While that power is admittedly expansive, the question which needs to be addressed, is to what extent (if any), does the Sixth Amendment's right to a fair and impartial fact-finder limit the Congressional power in the context of its’

³⁶ Congress is the culprit here by enacting Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, permitting non-unanimous guilty verdicts by only three-fourths of the voting members.

³⁷ Monea, Reforming Military Juries in the Wake of Ramos v. Louisiana, LXVI Naval L. Rev. 67, 68 (2020).

³⁸ Id. at 72.

“Make Rules” authority, to include its “Necessary and Proper” authority?

One aspect of the Sixth Amendment’s jury trial right is not (because it cannot be) applicable to courts-martial. That is the requirement of mandating jurors be from “the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law,” i.e., the Vicinage Clause. The “jury of one’s peers” concept. But, that has nothing to do with unanimous verdicts and a “fair trial.”³⁹

D. The Sixth Amendment Has Already Been Extensively Incorporated Into Our Military Justice System.

There is a long legal history of “incorporating” various other Sixth Amendment rights into our military justice system. Specifically, this includes servicemembers’ rights to:

1. Speedy Trial: United States v. Cooper, 58 M.J. 54, 57 (CAAF 2003): “In the military justice system, an accused’s right to a speedy trial flows from various sources, including the Sixth Amendment, Article 10 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, and R.C.M. 707 of the Manual for Courts–Martial.” [emphasis added].

³⁹ See, Chenoweth v. Van Arsdall, 46 C.M.R. 183, 185-86 (CMA 1973) [Mem. Opn.] for a discussion of the Vicinage Clause as being inapplicable to courts-martial. Of more importance is the Court’s holding that “federal practice applies to courts-martial if not incompatible with military law or with the special requirements of the military establishment.” Id. at 186. There is nothing “incompatible” with military law in requiring unanimous verdicts for serious crimes tried in the territorial limits of the United States. Congress itself proves that by statutorily requiring unanimous verdicts in capital cases. Article 52(b)(2), UCMJ. That demonstrates compatibility.

2. Public Trial: United States v. Grunden, 2 M.J. 116, 120 (CMA 1977) [superseded on other grounds]; and United States v. Hershey, 20 M.J. 433, 435 (CMA 1985). “Without question, the sixth-amendment right to a public trial is applicable to courts-martial.”
3. Confrontation: United States v. Blazier, 69 M.J. 218, 222 (CAAF 2010): “We hold that where testimonial hearsay is admitted, the Confrontation Clause is satisfied only if the declarant of that hearsay is either (1) subject to cross-examination at trial, or (2) unavailable and subject to previous cross-examination.” [Extensive discussion of Sixth Amendment’s Confrontation Clause].
4. Notice: United States v. Girouard, 70 M.J. 5, 10 (CAAF 2011):

The rights at issue in this case are constitutional in nature. The Fifth Amendment provides that no person shall be “deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law,” U.S. Const. amend. V, and the Sixth Amendment provides that an accused shall “be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation,” U.S. Const. amend. VI. Both amendments ensure the right of an accused to receive fair notice of what he is being charged with. [Emphasis added].
5. Compulsory Process: United States v. Bess, 75 M.J. 70, 75 (CAAF 2016): “The right to present a defense has many aspects. Under the Compulsory Process Clause, a defendant has a ‘right to call witnesses whose testimony is material and favorable to his defense.’” [quoting Rock v. Arkansas, 483 U.S. 44, 52 (1987); emphasis added].
6. The Right to Counsel: United States v. Wattenbarger, 21 M.J. 41, 43 (CMA 1985): “The first question we address is when did appellant's right to counsel under the sixth amendment attach. . . . In the military, this sixth-amendment right to counsel does not attach until preferral of charges.”

7. The Right to the Effective Assistance of Counsel: United States v. Gooch, 69 M.J. 353, 361 (CAAF 2011): “The Sixth Amendment guarantees a criminal accused, including military service members, the right to effective assistance of counsel.”

With the exception of unanimous verdicts, servicemembers facing a court-martial for serious offenses, receive the core panoply of constitutional trial rights and the military justice system is none the worse-for-wear because of that.

It is important to remember that Weiss also observed: “Congress has taken affirmative steps to make the system of military justice more like the American system of civilian justice” 510 U.S. at 179. Again, consistent with our position here. Weiss was decided 24 years before the Court’s decision in Ortiz, and its clarification from a constitutional perspective. Courts-martial are judicial proceedings, which include “procedural protections,” which is something that unanimity in verdicts clearly provides. The question is not Congressional authority, but rather why are servicemembers who are facing “serious charges” being denied this fundamental right—something that, as the “Boston Massacre” cases pointed out, was afforded British Soldiers in Massachusetts long-prior to our Independence and the ratification of the Constitution and Bill of Rights?

E. Enter Ramos.⁴⁰

Writing for the Court, Justice Gorsuch begins:

We took this case to decide whether the Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial—as incorporated against the States by way of the Fourteenth Amendment—requires a unanimous verdict to convict a defendant of a serious offense. [footnote omitted].

Id. at 1394. Here, there is no question that LTC Dial is facing trial for serious offenses under the UCMJ—no one disputes that. Digging into history, the Ramos opinion continues:

The text and structure of the Constitution clearly suggest that the term “trial by an impartial jury” carried with it some meaning about the content and requirements of a jury trial.

One of these requirements was unanimity. Wherever we might look to determine what the term “trial by an impartial jury trial” meant at the time of the Sixth Amendment's adoption—whether it's the common law, state practices in the founding era, or opinions and treatises written soon afterward—the answer is unmistakable. A jury must reach a unanimous verdict in order to convict.

The requirement of juror unanimity emerged in 14th century England and was soon accepted as a vital right protected by the common law. As Blackstone explained, no person could be found guilty of a serious crime unless “the truth of every accusation ... should ... be confirmed by the unanimous suffrage of twelve of his equals and neighbors, indifferently chosen, and superior to all suspicion.” A “ ‘verdict, taken from eleven, was no verdict’ ” at all. [internal footnotes omitted].

Id. at 1395.

⁴⁰ Ramos v. Louisiana, 140 S. Ct. 1390 (2020).

Nailing the point down, Justice Gorsuch again states, “as we've seen, at the time of the Amendment's adoption, the right to a jury trial meant a trial in which the jury renders a unanimous verdict.” Id. at 1400. And then, “[a] right mentioned twice in the Constitution would be reduced to an empty promise. That can't be right.” Id. [emphasis added]. Indeed, it wasn't and there is nothing from a historical perspective to suggest otherwise, especially in the context of “serious crimes” allegedly committed by servicemembers at the time of the Founding. Again, for clarification purposes, NACDL is not advocating for a civilian-style “jury” system—only that courts-martial verdicts by its Members be unanimous.

Justice Gorsuch in rejecting Louisiana's arguments for non-unanimity, observed:

All this overlooks the fact that, at the time of the Sixth Amendment's adoption, the right to trial by jury included a right to a unanimous verdict. When the American people chose to enshrine that right in the Constitution, they weren't suggesting fruitful topics for future cost-benefit analyses. They were seeking to ensure that their children's children would enjoy the same hard-won liberty they enjoyed. Id. at 1402.

He concludes as follows: “But it is something else entirely to perpetuate something we all know to be wrong only because we fear the consequences of being right.” Id. at 1408. Here, the consequences of being right is to accept unanimous verdicts in courts-martial.

Both the military judge below and the government's pleadings herein, rely upon an unpublished case, United States v. Mayo, 2017 WL 1323400 (ACCA), rev. denied, 77 M.J. 72 (CAAF 2017). Mayo begins with the language: “This opinion is issued as an unpublished opinion and, as such, does not serve as precedent.” [emphasis in original]. We take no position as to this Court’s decision as to its precedential value, if any. But, that Court noted something important for purposes of this case: “A requirement for a unanimous panel decision, while having obvious advantages in truth-determination, would also undercut several protections against unlawful command influence that exist under current military justice practice.” Id. at *8 [emphasis added]. The UCI reasons given by the Army Court may be superficially attractive, but they all ignore the obvious—UCI is a criminal offense under the UCMJ. Furthermore, that Court then concluded: “As a result, a requirement to keep deliberating until all members agree poses special concerns when one panel member outranks the other.” Id. But, for any practitioner, that has been a concern since the UCMJ went into effect in 1951.

We note anecdotally, that it would be a very rare occurrence for all members to be of equal rank. Rule 921(a), Rules for Courts-Martial (2019 ed.), addresses this: “Superiority in rank shall not be used in any manner in an attempt to control the independence of members in the exercise of their judgment.” It is also the reason that Military Judges are required to instruct the members as to Findings, as follows:

The following procedural rules will apply to your deliberations and must be observed. The influence of superiority in rank will not be employed in any manner in an attempt to control the independence of the members in the exercise of their own personal judgment. Your deliberation should include a full and free discussion of all the evidence that has been presented.⁴¹

The only value Mayo has is its candid observation that unanimous verdicts have “obvious advantages in truth-determination. . . .” If a trial by court-martial is indeed a “search for the truth,”⁴² then non-unanimous verdicts cannot be upheld under our Constitutional scheme.

* * *

Congressional powers are enumerated in the Constitution. In the area of military affairs, they are necessarily broad—but they are not absolute or unlimited. The Court in Weiss stated, “Congress . . . is subject to the requirements of the Due Process Clause.” 510 U.S. at 176. Whether found under the Due Process Clause or, as Ramos holds, under the Sixth Amendment’s Impartial Jury Clause, the right to a unanimous verdict in a criminal prosecution is constitutionally mandated. It does not matter what label is attached to the fact finder—“jurors” or “court Members”—the result must be the same. Contrary to the government’s argument and the Military Judge’s ruling below, ⁴¹ DA Pam. 27-9, Military Judges’ Benchbook, at 69.

⁴² See, e.g., Nix v. Whiteside, 475 U.S. 157, 171 (1986); United States v. Johnson, 41 M.J. 13, 16 (CMA 1994) [“The purpose of a trial is truthfinding within Constitutional, statutory, and ethical considerations.”] it is the Constitution that controls, not a provision within the UCMJ.

Chief Justice John Marshall's ruling in Marbury provides the criterion. The Constitution must take precedence—Article 52(a)(3), UCMJ, is in direct contravention and, as Marshall proclaimed, is void.

CONCLUSION

Ramos mandates unanimous verdicts in courts-martial for serious offenses. The RPI is respectfully entitled to a verdict compliant with that constitutional requirement.

March 15, 2022

Respectfully submitted,

/eS/ Donald G. Rehkopf, Jr.

DONALD G. REHKOPF, JR., Esq.

THE LAW OFFICE OF DONALD G. REHKOPF, JR.

31 East Main Street, 4th Floor (Right Suite)

Rochester, New York 14614

(585) 434-0232 - voice

usmilitarylaw@gmail.com

CAAF Bar # 20564

Counsel of Record

and

BARBARA E. BERGMAN, Esq.

Co-Chair, Amicus Curiae Committee

National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers

1201 Speedway Blvd.

Tucson, AZ 85721

bbergman@email.arizona.edu

Counsel for Amicus Curiae

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CRIMINAL DEFENSE LAWYERS

CERTIFICATION

Pursuant to Rule 17.1(b), ACCA Rules, this Brief is in compliance as it contains less than 50 pages. Furthermore, this Brief is in compliance with Rule 17.1(b), ACCA Rules, as it uses Times New Roman proportional type with 14 point font.

/eS/ Donald G. Rehkopf, Jr.
DONALD G. REHKOPF, JR., Esq.
Counsel for Amicus Curiae

CERTIFICATE OF FILING and PROOF OF SERVICE

The undersigned certifies that a true digital copy [“pdf”] of this pleading was filed electronically with the Court, Counsel for the Government, Counsel for the Real Party in Interest, and counsel for Amici Curiae, this 15th day of March, 2022.

GOVERNMENT

CPT Karey B. Marren
karey.b.marren.mil@army.mil

REAL PARTY IN INTEREST

MAJ Julia M. Farinas
julia.m.farinas.mil@army.mil

GOVERNMENT APPELLATE DIVISION

usarmy.pentagon.hqda-otjag.mbx.gadaccaservice@mail.mil

DEFENSE APPELLATE DIVISION

usarmy.pentagon.hqda-otjag.mbx.dad-accaservice@mail.mil

MILITARY JUDGE–RESPONDENT

COL Charles L. Pritchard
charles.l.pritchard2.mil@army.mil

AMICI CURIAE

Protect our Defenders
Peter Coote, Esq.
Pcoote@Pennoni.com

USAF Appellate Defense Division
Ryan S. Crnkovich, Major, USAF
ryan.crnkovich.3@us.af.mil

/eS/ Donald G. Rehkopf, Jr.
DONALD G. REHKOPF, JR., Esq.
Counsel for Amicus Curiae NACDL
31 East Main Street, 2nd Floor
Rochester, New York 14614
(585) 434-0232 - voice
usmilitarylaw@gmail.com
CAAF Bar # 20564